3/1/07

On 3/1/07, at approximately 8:51 P.M., plainclothes officers responded to a radio call for a "Person Screaming" in the 5600 block of Lancaster Avenue. Upon arrival, the officers observed the offender inside a parked Ford Expedition involved in a domestic dispute with his wife. Several of the wife's relatives were also inside the vehicle. The wife and family members exited the vehicle when the officers arrived, but the offender remained in the front passenger seat.

One officer approached the vehicle on the driver's side and ordered the offender to exit the vehicle. The offender, whose hands were concealed under his shirt and near his waistband, refused to exit the vehicle. The officer observed that the offender had an object in his hand under his shirt. The officer ordered the offender to show his hands several times, but the offender did not comply and made a sudden movement with his right hand. The officer then discharged his weapon, striking the offender. The offender was subdued by the officers and transported to the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. No weapon was recovered.
